

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An electronic mail transfer device which receives an electronic mail sent from a sending terminal through a communication line and sends the electronic received mail to a receiving terminal through the communication line according to an address of a destination party attached to the electronic mail, separates the electronic mail into text data and the other data when the received electronic mail includes the data other than the text data, and sends only the text data to the receiving terminal after relating the separated text data with the data other than the text data.